

The latest induction plancha technology was utilised, making this a truly state of the art installation.

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

A new counter section was designed and created inspired by the great curved arch window lintels of Chatsworth itself. This new section included new gantry's and heat lights along with a self-extraction unit to allow for a theatre cooking station. The latest induction plancha technology was utilised, making this a truly state of the art installation.

Due to the fact that the restaurant is so busy, especially in the run up to Christmas, the Stellex installation team worked through two nights to complete the transformation. Everybody was delighted with the end result and most importantly the client's expectations had been exceeded.

At Stellex we believe in providing you, the customer with a complete solution. Our installation team understand that they are one of the most vital links in the chain. Their attention to detail and commitment to customer satisfaction truly sets them apart.

Chatsworth House in the Peak District is one of Britain's most famous national treasures. It has been the ancestral seat of the Duke of Devonshire for centuries and is set in the most spectacular grounds with an incredible art collection, shopping facilities and restaurants.